

Early Western Imprints: Law in Hankow Collection

The Hankow Collection, held in the University Libraries' Special Collections, is a unique collection numbering more than 4,000 books, and was originally developed for the use of Hankow Club members including western merchants, government officials, missionaries and foreigners who lived in the treaty port of Hankow from 1861 onwards. It includes a great variety of books on various subjects written and/or published by westerners about China. This brief bibliography covers law related titles from the Hankow Collection which are currently not included in the Libraries' China Through Western Eyes database, a digital initiative which includes digitized documents from this collection.
